Dear Board of KOV,

Many thanks for your efforts to spread awareness about how banks create money in reality. This process, as you have pointed out, is very different from the theory as thought in most textbooks on economics.

Unfortunately, academia seems to take very long time to update their teaching materials and methods. Hopefully your efforts will speed things up.

I can not explain why it takes such a long time. Perhaps professors have stopped learning, or they are too busy to update their teaching materials.

Being an optimist, I remain hopeful that academia will come around, helped by efforts like yours.

Kind regards,
